A Primitive Faith with Highest Philosophy: SANAMAHISM — A Path to Fulfil Life's Purpose

Introduction

Sanamahism is one of the most ancient spiritual traditions of humanity, rooted in the land and soul of Kangleipak (Manipur). Though its origins stretch far into the depths of history, its wisdom remains timeless. It is often called a "primitive faith," yet beneath its ancient practices lies a profound philosophy about life, spirit, and the universe. Sanamahism does not ask a person to worship blindly—it encourages them to know themselves, understand their destiny, and live in harmony with nature and divine forces.

This spiritual path teaches that every being carries a sacred purpose, a mission shaped before birth and guided by the Supreme Spirit, Lainingthou Sanamahi. It explains that the body may perish, but the Thawai—the soul—continues its eternal journey, learning, growing, and evolving through countless lifetimes. Sanamahism shows how devotion, self-discipline, and spiritual connection can awaken the true power of the soul.

More than a religion, it is a way of life—a science of existence. It guides us to develop our inner strength, protect our spiritual energy, and fulfill our responsibility not only to ourselves but to our community and ancestors. It reminds us that every thought, every action, and every emotion shapes our spirit and our future.

This book is a journey into that sacred philosophy. It seeks to reveal the deeper meaning behind rituals, myths, and beliefs, and how they help us recognize who we are, where we come from, and what we are meant to become. Through understanding Sanamahism, we rediscover a truth: life is not an accident but a divine mission.

Let this book be an invitation to explore the ancient path, awaken the spirit, and walk boldly toward the purpose for which we were born.

Chapter 1 smoothly connected to this introduction.

This book explores Sanamahism not just as a faith but as a philosophy that continues to shape the cultural identity and spiritual consciousness of the Meitei people. It examines its origins, beliefs, rituals, and ethical teachings while reflecting on its relevance in contemporary society. Through this exploration, readers will gain insight into a worldview that values life, wisdom, and the eternal bond between humanity and the cosmos.

Fundamental Terms of Sanamahism

1. Lai

Definition: In Sanamahism, a “Lai” refers to a divine spirit — a partial manifestation of the Supreme Lord Atingkok. These spirits are powerful natural forces without personal memory or individuality. They exist everywhere throughout nature: in water, air, plants, and all natural substances.

Significance: Lai are worshipped in various forms—some as household guardians, some as local or regional deities, and some as universal powers. The concept of Lai emphasizes the omnipresence of spiritual forces in every aspect of life.

2. Khoyum Lai

Definition: Khoyum Lai refers to a collective of divine spirits (Lai) that are bound together by a unifying spiritual force. The term “Khoyum” originates from the older word “Khayom,” meaning “a pack or cluster from beneath.” Therefore, Khoyum Lai represents a group of Lai united under a single spiritual power or purpose.

When Do Lai Become Khoyum Lai? In the philosophy of Sanamahism, the Universe, the Earth, and all of Nature exist within the divine body of Lord Atingkok. Lai are the fundamental spiritual elements of Nature — just as blood circulates within a body. They form every structure of the natural world and contribute essential forces required for shaping and sustaining all living beings.

Lai become Khoyum Lai when they collectively bind under a single spiritual force or purpose, working together as a unified divine power within specific aspects of Nature.

How Lai Participate in the Creation of a Living Being

According to Sanamahism, Lai — the divine elements of nature — are gathered by the male body and then transferred to the female body through a vital spreading fluid known as Sanna Mahi (where Sanna means " spreading" and Mahi means "fluid"). Because of this sacred role:

- The father is called Panthou — meaning the one who collect and delivers the seed(duty of a dam)
- The mother is called Pallem — meaning the best nurturer of life

Thus, the formation of a living body takes place within the mother, where the divine elements are shaped into a human form.

Emergence of the Spirit (Thawai)

In Sanamahism, when a developing fetus forms its heart (Thou), a divine power ignites within — like a flame being lit. This power is called Thawai:

- Thou = Heart
- Wai = Energy or light emerging to the heart the heart

This power is called Thouwai/ Thawai:

- Thou = Heart
- Wai = Energy or light emerging to the heart

This Thawai carries the memories, instincts, and spiritual impressions collected through lifetimes. It gives identity, consciousness, and direction to the body.

After Death: From soul to Khoyum Lai/ spirit

If the Thawai is spiritually strong, it continues to exist independently even after the physical body dies. It does not dissolve into nature immediately. Instead:

- It becomes a Khayom Lai / Khoyum Lai
- Meaning: a collection or “packed group” of Lai, united by the power of the experiences it gained while living

Through this transformation, the individual spiritual power that once lived in a body becomes part of a collective spiritual force — a Khoyum Lai / spirit— serving nature, guiding life, and continuing the eternal cycle.

Essence of the Concept

- Lai are natural divine elements
- Living beings are formed when Lai take shape inside the mother’s body
- Thawai/ soul is the living flame of consciousness

- After death, a strong Thawai becomes Khoyum Lai, continuing in the spiritual realm

Spirits That Remain After Death

In Sanamahism, certain spirits continue to exist outside the physical body after a person's death. This often happens when death occurs with great emotional disturbance or physical suffering:

- A person who dies because of unbearable torture that deeply harms the heart
- A person who takes their own life in a state of shock, fear, or intense sorrow

After such deaths, people may notice unusual sounds or frightening sightings at the location. This is believed to be the restless spirit still present because its transition is incomplete.

Likewise, spirits of individuals who possessed strong willpower, leadership, or deep spiritual devotion — such as powerful kings and priests — often remain active even after death due to the strength of their Thawai (spiritual energy).

Human Spirits Becoming Deities

In Manipuri tradition, some remarkable individuals, through their extraordinary spiritual strength and contributions to society, transformed into divine spirits after death. Over time they were respected, worshipped, and became recognized as deities. Examples include:

- Amu Nonga Faba
- Sandham lairembi

- Panthoibi
- And many more umang lai that ware king

These deities are revered as powerful protectors and guides of the Meitei people, symbolizing that a noble human life can evolve into divine presence.

This belief reflects a key teaching of Sanamahism:

A strong and virtuous Thawai can rise beyond the human form and continue to serve nature and humanity as a powerful Khoyum Lai/spirit .

Two Types of Khoyum Lai After Death

Every spirit without a body becomes a form of Khoyum Lai, yet they are categorized into two groups:

Type of Khoyum Lai	How They Become One	Nature
Good / Formal Khoyum Lai	Through natural, peaceful, and spiritually balanced death	Calm, guiding, protective
Accidental / Unstable Khoyum Lai	Through sudden trauma, shock, or unfulfilled desires	Disturbed, restless, sometimes frightening

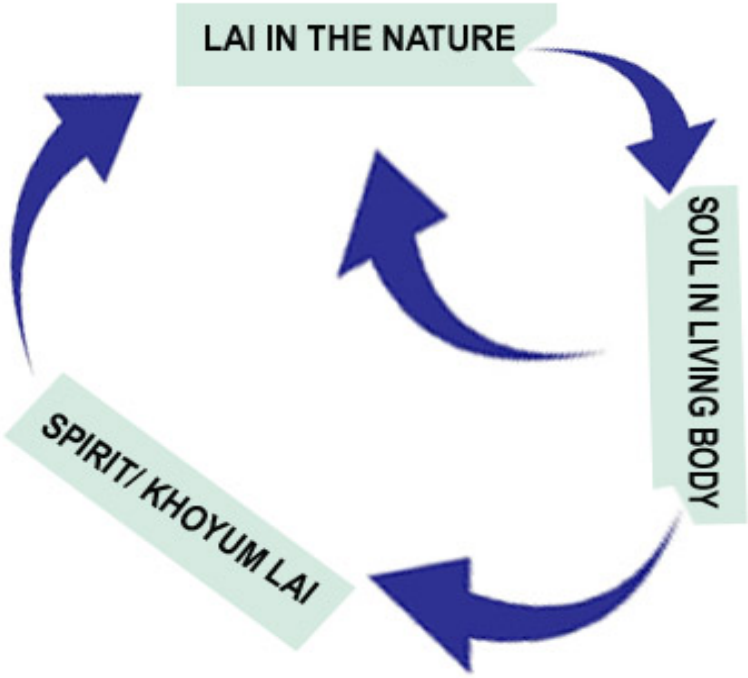

The first type joins the divine cycle smoothly and serves nature with harmony, while the second remains stuck near the world until peace is restored to their spirit(tamnalai).

Core Teaching

✔ A life lived with purpose and purity leads to divine evolution(Ningna Lai)

✘ A life ended in imbalance may trap the soul in suffering and become tamna lai.

So there is a cycle of lai

What is the power of THawai /soul and Khoyum lai/spirit :*

THE POWER OF A THAWAI /SOUL IN A LIVING BEING ARE

1. Emotional & Spiritual Connection A strong Thawai can transmit and receive emotional waves. It can share feelings, thoughts, and energies with another being whose spirit is equally strong. This creates an invisible bond — a silent communication between souls.
2. Intuitive Foresight When a soul becomes powerful and awakened, it gains enhanced intuition. It can sense upcoming events, dangers, or important life changes before they happen. The Thawai warns and guides the being through spiritual awareness.
3. Interaction with Higher Divine Forces (Khoyum Lai) A powerful Thawai can communicate with spiritual guardians and divine forces such as Khoyum Lai. Through spiritual strength and purity, the soul becomes capable of receiving guidance, protection, and blessings from higher beings.
4. Power to perform physical works using physical body.

The power of a khoyum lai /spirit

1. Mind Influence and Possession A Khoyum Lai can enter and influence the mind of a living being. If the person's soul (Thawai) is weak, the spirit may control thoughts, speech, or actions, making them say or do what the spirit desires.

2. Manifesting Illusions Khoyum Lai have the ability to create spiritual illusions — sounds, visions, or feelings that appear real. This can confuse or guide someone, depending on the spirit's intention.

3. Emotional and Sensory Manipulation A strong Khoyum Lai can make a living being feel emotions or sensations that the spirit wants — such as fear, peace, sadness, or inspiration.

This is how spirits communicate their presence and power.

4. Influence on Birth and Personality Some Khoyum Lai take part in forming a new life by attaching themselves to the soul during birth. Their presence can shape the person's character, behavior, talents, and spiritual path throughout life.

Who Are the Gods Worshiped in This World?

According to sanamahism The gods worshiped across the world are of two main origins:

1. Ancient Spirits from the Beginning of Creation Some gods are considered fragments or manifestations of the first primordial spirit that formed when the universe or world began. These spirits hold cosmic authority — over nature, life, seasons, destiny, and the balance of existence. They are worshiped because they guide and govern the natural order.
2. Transcended Spirits of Remarkable Beings Some gods were once living humans or beings who had extraordinary wisdom, courage, or purity. After death, their Thawai (soul) continued to exist with great power. Their influence, protection, and good deeds for their people led them to be worshiped as gods, ancestors, or guardian spirits.

Why Spirits and Khoyum lai Incarnate? Understanding the Purpose of Life in Physical Form According to Sanamahism

In Sanamahism, every Thawai (spirit) takes a physical form with a divine purpose. Incarnation is not random; it is a deliberate process for the growth, learning, and service of the spirit. Every lifetime is a step in the journey toward spiritual strength, ultimately contributing to the harmony of Atingkok's creation.

Part 1: Purpose of Life for Normal Spirits

Normal spirits incarnate to gain experience, grow in strength, and evolve spiritually. The physical form provides a sacred field for learning and development.

1. To Experience Physical Life

- Spirits encounter joys, challenges, and relationships.
- These experiences develop patience, empathy, courage, and wisdom.
- Struggles in the body help the spirit realize its true potential.

3. To Learn the Principles of Living

- Every life continues lessons from previous existences.
- Mistakes are corrected, virtues are strengthened, and spiritual character is refined.

4. To Experience Duality and Contrast

- Life is full of opposites: happiness and sorrow, strength and weakness.
- Through these contrasts, the spirit understands balance and the full spectrum of existence.

5. To Fulfill a Pre-Curved Purpose

- Every spirit is guided by Khoyum Lai toward a unique life mission.
- Completing this purpose strengthens the spirit and contributes to harmony in Nature.

6. To Experience Relationships and Love

- Family, friendship, and compassion provide lessons in emotional growth.
- The spirit learns interconnectedness and responsibility toward others.

7. To Understand the Material World

- Experiencing hunger, fatigue, health, and natural limits fosters humility, gratitude, and awareness of the universe.

Essence: Normal spirits incarnate primarily for self-growth, learning, and alignment with Nature. After fulfilling their lessons, they evolve spiritually and may become part of Khoyum Lai.

Part 2: Purpose of Life for Deities

Some spirits, through extraordinary virtue, wisdom, or spiritual strength, incarnate with a higher mission — to become deities. Their purpose goes beyond personal growth; it involves teaching, protecting, and guiding others.

1 To Teach Lessons

- Deities manifest to guide humans, animals, and Nature.

- They exemplify moral, ethical, and spiritual principles through their actions.

1. To Rule and Maintain Order

- Certain deities oversee natural forces, social order, or spiritual laws.
- They ensure harmony and justice according to Atingkok's will.

2. To Protect from Evil Spirits and Forces

- Deities act as guardians against negative influences.
- They safeguard individuals, communities, and natural spaces from harmful spirits.

3. To Inspire Devotion and Growth

- By being worshipped and revered, deities help humans strengthen their Thawai and align with their pre-curved purpose.
- Their presence encourages spiritual discipline, courage, and devotion.

4. To Serve as Eternal Guides

- Deities continue to exist beyond physical death as powerful Khoyum Lai.
- They interact with the world to maintain balance, support life, and uplift weaker spirits.

Essence: Deities incarnate not for personal growth alone but to teach, guide, protect, and maintain the divine order in the world. Their Thawai remains potent, becoming enduring Khoyum Lai that serve Nature and humanity.

Conclusion
In essence, incarnation is a sacred opportunity for the soul to evolve through experience. By living in a physical form, spirits gain lessons that accelerate their spiritual growth, resolve past karmic patterns, fulfill higher purposes, and develop empathy and love. Life, with all its challenges and joys, is a school for the soul—a realm where the invisible becomes tangible, and where consciousness learns the value of embodiment.

How You Came into This World of the Living

Long before your first breath, your Thawai — the spirit essence that would become your soul — floated freely in the world of nature. These spirit particles, known as Lai, carried pure life energy, untouched by memory, yet ready to awaken.

Then, a sacred moment arrived. Your father and mother came together, and the invisible dance of life began.

The Father's Gift

From your father flows the lineage of life. Through his bloodline, his experiences, and the strength of his ancestors, he gathers the spiritual essence that forms your seed. This essence, carried within him, travels to your mother — a spark of life ready to merge with the world.

The Mother's Gift

Your mother provides the sacred vessel — the body. Within her womb, flesh, blood, and life are shaped. It is here that your spiritual essence enters the forming body, merging with the physical to awaken as a living soul.

The Ways of Birth

The arrival of life may happen in many ways:

- By Chance: Two spirits meet naturally, and life flows spontaneously.
- By Divine Will: A Khoyum Lai may guide the spirit, or ancestral blessings may choose to continue the family line. In this case, your birth is not just an event — it is a mission, a continuation of purpose.

A Living Philosophy

You are the meeting point of two worlds: the spiritual and the physical.

- Your Thawai gives you purpose, direction, and the essence of life.
- Your body gives presence, form, and the ability to act in the world.

Together, spirit and body create a living being — a bridge between Nature, your ancestors, and the divine. From this sacred union, life unfolds, carrying lessons, purpose, and the spark of Atingkok into the world.

Do You Know Your purpose of Birth?

If you are born under the will of a Khoyum Lai, your life is guided by a pre-curved purpose — a mission written even before your birth. Such spirits carry a subtle, silent guidance that shapes their journey.

Their dreams, strengths, and struggles are not random; they are signs of a purpose that existed before they entered the physical world. Life, in this sense, is a story already in motion, continuing through their actions and choices.

If you are one of these souls, your responsibility is clear: seek to understand your purpose and strive to fulfill it. Doing so aligns your Thawai with the will of the Khoyum Lai, allowing your life to flow in harmony with the divine order of Atingkok and the natural world.

When Your Birth Happens by Nature — Without a Predetermined Calling

If your birth occurs naturally, without the guidance of a Khoyum Lai, you enter the world free — with no predetermined mission or script to follow.

In such a life, it becomes your responsibility to create your own purpose. because Without conscious direction, life risks becoming like that of a low-memory creature a worm or an insect whose existence is limited to survival and death.

Unlike spirits born with a purpose, a naturally-born spirit must actively seek meaning, cultivate understanding, and shape its destiny. Only through conscious effort can the Thawai grow, evolve, and leave a lasting imprint on the world and on the spiritual realm of Atingkok.

Life gives them a blank book they must write their own chapters. Because if you do not do so your life is just like a han or dog's life . animal's life is born by chance and live for life only as an avoidable. No meaning no purpose.

A Golden Chance:

Whether born by destiny or by chance,

there is one sacred truth:To become a living spirit is a golden chance. Why?

Because only the living can:

- Choose
- Change
- Create
- Love
- Transform
- Fight
- Grow

Even the most powerful spirit without a body cannot touch the world as deeply as a living human can.

Being alive means:

- You can make mistakes and still rise.
- You can turn weakness into wisdom.
- You can shape your soul into something divine and immortan .

What Is a Reasonable Purpose of Your Life?

Every human must seek a purpose. Without purpose, life becomes empty and without direction. In Sanamahism, a meaningful purpose can be understood in three levels:

1. To Become a Living Spirit (Khayom Lai)

To grow your Thawai (soul) so strong and pure that even after your body dies, your spirit continues to exist in the spiritual world.
This is the highest purpose — to achieve immortality through wisdom, willpower, and righteous action.

2. To Lead an Honorable and Meaningful Life

To be respected, to contribute to society, to uphold truth, justice, and compassion. An honorable life strengthens the spirit and builds ancestral pride.

3. To Live a Life of Well-Being and Prosperity

Good health, security, financial strength, and happiness allow you to support your family and fulfill your duties. Wealth itself is not the goal — but it supports the higher purposes of life.

Here's a polished and clear rewrite of your Minimum Expectation section, keeping the essence intact and aligned with Sanamahism philosophy:

Minimum Expectation

At the very least, a person should strive for a prosperous and self-reliant life. Without basic stability, it becomes difficult to cultivate spiritual growth, honor, or purpose.

If one does not even aim for this level of self-sufficiency, their life becomes aimless — like a madman wandering the streets, or even lower than that of small creatures. Even insects or animals act with purpose: they search for food and sustain themselves. A human who cannot achieve this basic level of life neglects the responsibilities of the spirit and body entrusted to them by Atingkok.

Absolutely! Here's a complete, polished, and continuous chapter for your book on Sanamahism, combining everything from the start into a coherent narrative with all points expanded.

Symbols of a Life Curved by a Spirit

In Sanamahism, a life guided by a Khoyum Lai — a pre-existing spiritual force — carries both visible and invisible signs of purpose. Such a life is not random; it reflects the alignment of the Thawai (soul) with its pre-curved mission. A life curved by spirit shows itself through inner guidance, talents, challenges, connections, and a purposeful path. These signs reveal that the individual is following the course laid by the divine will of a Khoyum Lai.

1. Inner Guidance

A life curved by spirit often carries a deep, silent guidance that feels like intuition or instinct.
The person may receive vivid dreams that hint at choices or actions they must take.
They often sense what is right or wrong beyond ordinary reasoning.
Even in difficult situations, there is an inner voice steering decisions.
This guidance may appear as sudden insight or clarity at the right moment.
It is subtle and cannot be forced, but it consistently points toward the soul's purpose.

2. Strengths and Talents

Natural abilities often reveal the presence of a guiding spirit.
These talents may appear early in life or emerge under specific circumstances.
They can include intellectual sharpness, creative skill, physical strength, or emotional resilience.
Such strengths are not random; they are tools given to accomplish the pre-curved purpose. People may feel drawn to certain tasks or roles effortlessly. When utilized properly, these talents help the individual influence others positively. Failing to recognize these gifts may result in wasted potential. Acknowledging and using them strengthens the Thawai and fulfills the mission.

3. Signs in Dreams and Visions

A life curved by a Khoyum Lai often shows guidance through dreams and visions. These dreams may carry warnings, advice, or glimpses of future events. They often appear repeatedly, emphasizing their importance. Visions may be symbolic, requiring interpretation and reflection.

Sometimes, these dreams inspire courage or reveal hidden talents.

The messages are usually subtle but unmistakable once understood.

Ignoring these signs can delay the fulfillment of purpose. Paying attention strengthens the Thawai and aligns actions with the pre-curved mission.

4. Unexplained Guidance or Protection

Those guided by a spirit frequently experience protection beyond ordinary understanding. They may survive dangerous situations without clear reason. Unseen forces seem to guide their steps or warn them of danger. This guidance often comes as intuition, sudden thoughts, or coincidences.

It may also appear as support from strangers or timely assistance.

Such protection is a sign of alignment with the Khoyum Lai.

8. Attraction to Spiritual or Noble Endeavors . People whose lives are curved by spirit feel naturally drawn to meaningful work.

They are often attracted to learning, teaching, healing, or protecting others.
Creative and intellectual pursuits may feel necessary rather than optional.
Service to the community or environment becomes a source of fulfillment.
They may feel responsibility for preserving traditions or guiding others spiritually.
Such attraction indicates the pre-existing purpose carried by the Thawai. Choosing these paths strengthens the connection with the Khoyum Lai. Following this inclination ensures the life is purposeful and leaves a lasting positive impact.

Conclusion

A life guided by a Khoyum Lai is like a river flowing along a pre-defined course.
It is shaped by unseen spiritual forces but purposeful in every turn.
The Thawai expresses its potential through guidance, talents, challenges, and devotion. It learns, grows, and aligns with nature, ancestors, and the divine order of Atingkok.
Recognizing these signs allows a person to live consciously and meaningfully.

Key Components to Fulfill Your Purpose of Life According to Sanamahism

Sanamahism teaches that every spirit must have a pre-curved or newly formed purpose — a divine mission to fulfill. To achieve this purpose and transform the soul into a living, awakened being, one must follow these four essential components:

1. Know Yourself

- Understand the true nature of your spirit — your strengths, weaknesses, passions, and inner calling.
- Self-awareness opens the door to spiritual awakening and aligns your actions with your divine essence.

The Flow charts of Self-Discovery in Sanamahism is asking a sequence of questions they are:

1.Who are you?
Common answer: "I am Tomba / I am James."
→ This is only a name given to the physical form.

2. Then what is that name referring to?
Common answer: "It is the living person standing here."
→ That describes the body, a material form.

3. Will that (the one who lives) still exist when the body dies?
Common answer: "Yes, it will live."
→ This accepts the existence of life beyond the body.

4. What is that which exists beyond death?
Common answer: "It is the spirit of this body."
→ The spirit (Thawai) continues its journey.

5. Then what is this spirit?
Common answer: "It is the power that keeps this body alive and continues after death."
→ Spirit is not the body — it is the eternal living energy within.

6. If so, define this power.
Common answer: “It is the power described as the power of Thawai (Soul) .in short

1. ablility to can transmit and receive emotional waves.
2. ablility to Intuitive Foresight
3. Ablility to sense upcoming events, dangers, or important life changes before they happen.
4. ablility to Interaction with Higher Divine Forces (Khoyum Lai)
5. to drive your body to perform physical works

The first 4 is special power owned only by spiritually strong people. So the most important and common in these is the fifth for a living being . so to know myself is to know what your soul can make you.

Among all the powers of the soul, the greatest is its power to act—to use the physical body as a tool to express purpose, courage, creativity, and greatness. Without action, even the strongest soul remains unseen, and its brilliance stays locked inside.

To know yourself means discovering what your soul is capable of achieving through your actions. It means exploring how far your strength, talent, and determination can take you in this life.

You are a being with unlimited possibilities — created to grow, to create, to protect, to rise, and to leave a mark that continues even after your body stops breathing. Because the material that being your soul is the same that made the spirit of the Gods and great people in this world.
Your deeds become the footprints of your soul, the proof that your spirit once lived with purpose.

And according to your exercises and discipline, the power you develop today will be the power your soul carries into the future. Every effort, every skill you build, and every challenge you overcome becomes spiritual strength — a power your soul will use even beyond this life.

So, the journey of knowing yourself is not just understanding who you are, but unlocking who you can become.
You are not here only to exist — You are here to become great, to use your soul's power to its fullest, and to ensure your spirit continues to live with glory even after death.

2. Detect Your Life's Purpose and Plan Accordingly

(According to Sanamahism)

Knowing yourself is the first step — but knowing why you are here is the second and equally important component of a meaningful life.

According to Sanamahism, every spirit born with a pre-designed purpose or by nature, must have a role to fulfill in this world. Even though Your existence is an accident or by chance ; your soul has a mission that must be discovered and lived.

To detect your purpose means:

- Understanding what your Thawai (Soul) desires to achieve
- Discovering the abilities and strengths you were gifted with

- Listening to your inner calling — the feeling that says “This is what I am meant to do”
- Recognizing what gives your life meaning and joy
- Accepting the responsibility to use your talents for a greater good

Once your purpose is known, you must plan accordingly.
A purpose without a plan remains only a dream. Here you can take help from Dities if your life is a pre crafted one . otherwise you can take help from any intellectuals to fulfill.

Planning gives direction to your soul’s power:

- It defines the path you must walk
- It organizes your actions toward success
- It protects you from being distracted by meaningless things
- It converts spiritual potential into real achievements

In Sanamahism, fulfilling your purpose is the way your soul earns its glory, strength, and continuity beyond death. When you walk in the direction of your calling, your soul becomes more powerful, more awakened, and more prepared for eternal life.

So, the second essential component is:
Find your purpose and shape your life to achieve it.
Because a spirit without purpose is like a body without movement — alive, but not truly living.

3. Attract Your Soul to Your Purpose

(According to Sanamahism)

Once you know your purpose, the next duty is to involve your soul fully in everything you do.
A body can work without interest, but a soul-filled action always leads to success.

In traditional Manipuri culture, elders often scold children by saying:
“Involve your soul when you read the book!” (Lairik pabada thawai yao para fagni)

This simple sentence carries deep wisdom.
It means that when you bring your Thawai (Soul) into your actions, you truly understand, learn, and grow.

When the soul is connected to a purpose:

- Work becomes meaningful
- Learning becomes enjoyable
- Discipline becomes natural
- Success becomes inevitable

A distracted soul creates a weak and confused life.
A focused soul shapes a powerful destiny.

Sanamahism teaches that the spirit has its own energy — like a magnet.
Where your attention and love are directed, your spiritual power begins to flow.

So, to achieve your purpose:

- Love what you are doing
- Feel that it is part of your destiny
- Keep your soul aligned with your goal

Because when the soul supports the action, nothing in this world can stop your success.

Your purpose becomes your passion.
Your passion becomes your power.
Your power becomes your future — even after this life.

A Sign That Your Soul is Truly Connected

There is a clear symbol that shows your soul has fully joined your purpose:

 When you begin to think about your goal even in your dreams.

If a deed enters your dreams, it means:

- Your soul is working on it even while your body rests
- Your inner spirit has accepted the goal as part of its destiny
- Your subconscious mind is planning the path to success
- Your purpose has become a deep part of who you are

In Manipuri understanding, this is considered a holy sign — your Thawai (Soul) and your action have become one team.

So, the ultimate proof that your soul is attracted to your work is not just hard effort during the day…
but when your purpose continues even in your sleep.

- If your soul is truly committed to your purpose, even your dreams will guide you toward success. Your mind may miss certain ideas during the day — but your soul will continue to work silently at night, revealing solutions, showing better paths, and strengthening your inner direction.
- This is the moment where success becomes inevitable — because your soul and purpose are moving together.
- The deeper meaning of "Attracting your Soul to your Purpose" is what we call Lainingba — Concentration. It is not just focusing with the mind, but engaging the entire spiritual power within you. Your emotions, thoughts, and inner energy all flow toward one clear destination.
- When concentration reaches this spiritual level, your soul becomes the driving force of your dream — guiding you, inspiring you, and refusing to let you fail.
- Here is a refined and meaningful version of that sentence, keeping your spiritual concept intact:

- If you are truly devoted, even the Khoyum Lai — the guiding spirits — will show you the way to succeed. They will open the right paths, send the right thoughts, and support your purpose with unseen strength.
- Devotion creates a sacred bond. Through that bond, the spirits recognize your sincerity and help you reach the destiny that your soul is seeking.

What are the differences between Devotion (Thougalba) and Concentration (Lainingba)?

• Thougalba is the pure love and respect we express without deep expectation of anything in return.
It is emotional and spiritual loyalty just like serving parents with affection, honoring elders, worshipping the divine, not because we want a reward, but because our heart feels connected and grateful.
Devotion strengthens the soul from within — it gives peace, humility, and a sense of belonging to something greater than ourselves.

• Lainingba is when we pull our soul toward a purpose with full intention. It is more than just mental focus — it is the alignment of thought, emotion, and spirit so that all our inner power flows toward one direction.
In concentration, every action becomes sharp,
every effort becomes meaningful,
and success becomes a natural result of spiritual focus.

Deeper Essence

- Thougalba gives the soul warmth —
  the heart becomes soft, loving, and connected.
  It is the foundation of faith and relationship.
- Lainingba gives the soul strength —
  the mind becomes clear, determined, and unshakeable.
  It is the path to achieving goals and shaping destiny.

Devotion says:
“I give my love.”

Concentration says:
“I give my power.”

When They Come Together

A devoted person gains blessings and inner purity. A concentrated person gains success and mastery. But a person who has both devotion and concentration — becomes unstoppable.

Because: Devotion attracts divine support. Concentration activates the soul’s energy.

When the heart loves and the soul focuses, every dream becomes possible.

> practice: Devotion inspires the soul, while concentration channels that inspiration into effective, purposeful action.

Concentration is necessary because it connects you deeply to the object of your attention, just like empathy connects you to another person’s need.
For example, imagine a friend asking you for ₹1000on the way without taking time. If he simply says, “I need money,” you might not feel compelled to help. But if he explains his situation — how helpless and desperate he is — your heart is touched, and you feel a genuine urge to give.

Similarly, when you are seeking something from a Khoyum Lai (spirit), mere asking is not enough. You must focus your mind and heart entirely . concentrate — so your soul is fully present and connected to the spirit. This focused energy allows the spirit to “feel” your need and respond, just like empathy moves a human heart to action.

In Sanamahism, there exists a powerful and ancient system of concentration known as Hirilon.
It is not just meditation —
it is a disciplined spiritual practice where the Thawai (soul) is trained to focus with full purity and purpose.

To support this sacred practice, our ancestors built a special structure called Hirisang —a specially designed hut for training the mind and soul.
Every detail of the Hirisang, from its size to its direction, was aligned with cosmic energy, silence, and spiritual purity to enhance the power of concentration.

2. Why Hirilon and Hirisang Are Unique
   • They teach the soul to stay rooted in one purpose
   • They sharpen the mind beyond ordinary human limits
   • They open the path to spiritual strength and divine guidance
   • They help emotions become calm and stable
   • They awaken hidden abilities inside the spirit
   Hirilon was practiced by warriors, healers, philosophers, and priests to gain clarity, courage, and inner power.
   Those who mastered it were known for exceptional focus, wisdom, and discipline.

3. A Treasure Almost Forgotten
4. Today, very few people know about Hirilon and Hirisang.

Modern distractions have made us forget this deep science of inner mastery. But in truth, this ancient method remains one of the most effective and powerful ways of developing concentration ever discovered by humankind.
It is a lost heritage of the Meitei people — a timeless gift waiting to be revived.

By returning to Hirilon, we do not just strengthen our mind we awaken the full power of our spirit.
Hirisang is more than a place — it is a doorway to the highest potential of the soul.

5. Protect Your Power

You know your spiritual power contains

1. ablility to can transmit and receive emotional waves.
2. Ablility to Intuitive Foresight
3. Ablility to sense upcoming events, dangers, or important life changes before they happen.
4. ablility to Interaction with Higher Divine Forces (Khoyum Lai)
5. to drive your body to perform physical works

On the other hand other person's soul too have this ablility . and living spirit around us also have the power to

1. Mind Influence and Possession A Khoyum Lai can enter and influence the mind of a living being.
2. Manifesting Illusions Khoyum Lai have the ability to create spiritual illusions — sounds, visions, or feelings that appear real.

3. Emotional and Sensory Manipulation A strong Khoyum Lai can make a living being feel emotions or sensations that the spirit wants

4. Influence on Birth and Personality Some Khoyum Lai take part in forming a new life by attaching themselves to the soul during birth.

Here is a smoother, expanded version with preventive measures added:

It is common in this world for other beings — even other spirits to influence a person's soul and use their power to fulfill their purposes. In Sanamahism, this spiritual influence is called Nungshit Changba — meaning "entering air" or an unseen force entering the body.

This phenomenon is understood to happen in two main forms:

1. Forced Entry by a Spirit

A stronger spirit enters the body of someone whose soul is weak or unprotected. The person may become unconscious or lose control, and the spirit demands offerings or certain actions through that person. Here, the spirit uses the human body as a tool to satisfy its desires.

2. Deceptive Entry Pretending to Be an Ancestor

A spirit enters the body and pretends to be a guiding ancestral soul —claiming to provide help, power, or prosperity. It demands special offerings, builds throne-like seats, or even entire *temples*so people continue to worship it. The spirit gains power from that devotion — while the person slowly loses their own purpose and energy.

Why This Happens

A soul that is not focused, disciplined, or spiritually aware becomes easy to influence. Such a person can be moved away from their true destiny without even realizing it.

Preventive Measures in Sanamahism

To protect the soul's power and purpose:

✔ Practice Hirilon (Concentration) — keep your Thawai strong and clear
✔ Maintain moral discipline — avoid behaviors that weaken the spirit
✔ Stay in connection with your own ancestral Lai — not unknown spirits
✔ Perform cleansing rituals to keep negative forces away
✔ Do not give devotion to spirits you do not deeply understand
✔ Use your power first for your own destined purpose

The Key Message

Your soul carries a purpose given by the Supreme Spirit. If you allow other forces — human or spiritual — to take your focus, time, or devotion, you may end up serving their destiny instead of your own.

When your concentration is strong and your spirit is protected, no influence can divert you. Your soul becomes the master of your body, your actions, and your destiny.

On the other hand, if you do not guard your inner energy, other people's souls can influence you, and may even use your power to fulfill their purposes. This often happens quietly —through your emotions, your attention, and the way you spend your time. When your soul's strength is taken or misused by others, your own dreams weaken, your focus wavers, and your progress toward your true purpose is delayed. Protecting your power, therefore, is the same as protecting the purpose of your life. Your energy, clarity, and inner focus are sacred gifts —they must remain aligned with what you are truly meant to achieve.

Here is the revised section with your added point, smoothly integrated into the flow:

How to Protect Your Soul's Power

• Avoid negative influences, harmful habits, and meaningless distractions —they slowly drain your spirit and weaken your inner strength.

• Guard your values, your time, and your clarity — these are sacred tools given to you for fulfilling your life's true mission.

• Be mindful of people who constantly pull you into their goals
while neglecting your needs and your path.

•Remember:
Behind every negative influence and every diversion of your mind, there is always a soul or spirit trying to fulfill its own purpose while ignoring or weakening yours. Losing focus is not just a mental issue — it is a spiritual attack on your destiny.

Example

Imagine a friend comes and asks you to help with his family work.
You leave your studies or an important task to assist him. Your time, energy, and focus are spent fulfilling his purpose, not yours. Even if you do not notice it, your spiritual power is quietly diverted from your own goals.

Helping others is a noble virtue, but when it becomes a habit that steals your progress, your soul grows weaker and your destiny gets delayed.

Key Message

Your soul's power must first be invested in what you are born to achieve.
You must be a person of discipline and strong moral character, with a mind and soul framed by clarity, purpose, and integrity.
When your purpose is protected, you gain enough strength, focus, and spiritual power to help others without losing yourself.

4. Strengthen Your Spiritual Power

Protecting your spirit is not enough — you must continuously strengthen your Thawai .
A powerful soul can resist manipulation, stay connected to truth, and guide the mind and body toward your purpose.

Your spiritual strength grows through:

1. Self-Knowledge
   When you truly know who you are and what your purpose is, no spirit or person can mislead you. Clarity is the strongest shield.
2. Emotional Discipline
   Each time you control anger, fear, greed, or jealousy — your soul becomes stronger. Negative emotions weaken the soul and create openings for spiritual interference.
3. Connection with Lainingthou Sanamahi
   Devotion and prayer are not blind obedience — they nourish your soul.
   Through Sanamahi , you receive:
   - Protection
   - Guidance
   - Spiritual energy
   - Courage to follow your purpose
4. Purifying Your Lifestyle
   Good thoughts, clean surroundings, and honest actions generate high-vibration energy.
   A pure soul becomes unshakable.
5. Meditation and Concentration (Lainingba)
   Focusing your soul on a purpose strengthens your inner power.
   When your attention is strong, your destiny becomes stronger.
6. Protecting Your Emotional Boundaries
   Do not allow others to:

- Drain your energy
- Control your decisions
- Force their beliefs and purpose onto you Respecting yourself strengthens the walls of your soul.

The Strong Soul Leads, the Weak Soul Follows

If your Thawai is strong:

- You influence the world
- You attract positive energies
- You walk confidently toward your purpose

If your Thawai is weak:

- Others will influence your choices
- Spirits may alter your destiny
- Your life will move away from your true path

Conclusion

To fulfill the divine purpose placed in you:

 Know your soul
 Protect your power
 Strengthen your spirit daily

Because you have a pre-designed path, a destiny carved by Sanamahi . Your duty is to protect your soul from misdirection and keep moving toward the life you were created for.

Universal Application of the Four-Legged System

This four-legged system of daily spiritual and mental discipline must be applied by students, youth, businesspersons, householders, and adults alike. Regardless of whether one seeks a short-term goal or a long-term purpose, this framework stabilizes the mind, strengthens concentration, and aligns personal effort with spiritual guidance. When practiced consistently, it becomes a reliable foundation for progress in education, career, family life, and personal growth.

Chapter: The Law of Result — No Sin, Only Consequence in Sanamahism

Here's a more expanded and smooth version of your text:

The Way of Universal Justice

Sanamahism does not teach that human beings are born sinful or inherently flawed.
Unlike some beliefs that emphasize innate guilt or wrongdoing, our tradition sees the soul as neutral at birth — capable of growth, learning, and the unfolding of its true potential.

There is no concept of a supreme god who punishes every mistake.
Instead, our ancient wisdom emphasizes personal responsibility and natural consequence.
As the Meitei elders teach:"

"Nangna toubna nangna fange means Whatever the soul creates, the soul must experience."

Every thought, action, and intention sets energy in motion.
Life is not a system of arbitrary rewards or punishments, but a carefully balanced web of cause and effect. When we act, speak, or think, we generate forces that will inevitably return to us, not to harm or reward, but to teach the soul important lessons about its choices and their consequences.

In Sanamahism, justice is universal and self-operating—it is the natural balance of the universe, ensuring that every soul experiences what it creates.
Thus, life becomes a mirror: what we sow with our mind, heart, and actions will always come back, guiding us toward wisdom, growth, and harmony.

Toujaman Fangba — The Return of One's Own Action

In Sanamahism, the principle of justice is called Toujaman Fangba, which means "the return of one's own action."
It explains that every thought, word, and deed creates energy — and that energy inevitably comes back to the soul in a form that teaches, guides, or balances.

This is not punishment, nor is it reward in the human sense.
It is natural consequence — the universe maintaining harmony and equilibrium.
If our actions are positive, kind, and purposeful, the energy returns to strengthen, uplift, and support our soul.
If our actions are harmful, selfish, or careless, the soul experiences lessons that correct, refine, or challenge it.

How Toujaman Fangba Works

• Thoughts: Every intention we hold plants a seed. Positive thoughts attract clarity and insight. Negative or distracted thoughts return as confusion or obstacles.

• Words: What we speak carries energy. Truthful, kind, and inspiring speech nourishes the soul. Hurtful, false, or careless speech creates experiences that teach humility and restraint.

• Actions: Every act of kindness, service, or creation strengthens the soul. Every act of harm or neglect generates lessons that cannot be ignored.

Toujaman Fangba reminds us that life is not random. We are not punished arbitrarily, nor are we rewarded superficially.
Everything happens because the soul itself is learning, growing, and balancing.
It is a system of universal justice — ensuring that the consequences of every choice are naturally experienced.

The Wisdom of Toujaman Fangba

Understanding Toujaman Fangba teaches the soul responsibility.
We act wisely not out of fear of punishment, but because we recognize the power of our own actions to shape our destiny, our character, and our spiritual growth.

In this way, Sanamahism shows a path to living consciously: to think, speak, and act with care, to cultivate kindness and clarity, and to understand that the universe itself supports the soul in learning the lessons it must experience.

There Is No Concept of Sin in sanamahism and no word caring resemble meaning in Meitei language.

The idea of “sin” creates fear:

- Fear of punishment
- Fear of God
- Fear of guilt

Sanamahism encourages responsibility, not fear. We do good not because we are afraid of punishment or hell, but because every righteous action strengthens and lightens the soul.

We avoid harming others not out of fear of judgment, but because we understand the value of peace and harmony in our own life.

Importantly, Sanamahism does not emphasized forgive or forget a wrong deed. if the wrongdoer refuses to acknowledge and surrender their guilt. Only through sincere acceptance and responsibility does the soul experience the natural consequences and learn its lesson.

True growth comes from acknowledgment, correction, and surrender, not denial, avoidance, or excuses. In this way, every action becomes an opportunity for the soul to become wiser, stronger, and more aligned with its true purpose.

How Consequences Find Their Way

The result of a deed may come through:

- Life circumstances
- Other people
- Animals
- Nature
- Accidents
- Illness
- Loss
- Or even the silent pain of guilt

Sometimes, the most powerful punishment is internal: A killer may stay alive, but his heart becomes a prison.

Your soul remembers what your mind tries to forget.

Intention: The Seed of Every Result

In Sanamahism, the real deed is Intention.

Two people may do the same action:

- One with love
- One with ego

The results will not be the same.

A clean mind produces clean consequences. A dark intention produces dark consequences.

Learning, Not Eternal Punishment

Mistakes are part of human life. Sanamahism does not shame the soul.

Instead, it teaches:

- Accept what you did
- Understand why it was wrong
- Correct your behavior
- Become wiser

A mistake becomes a lesson and the soul becomes stronger.

Conclusion: You Are the Writer of Your Fate

Sanamahism gives great freedom:

✔ No sin
✔ No eternal hell
✔ No divine punishment

But it also gives great responsibility:

 You are the cause of your happiness
 You are the cause of your suffering
 You are the creator of your future

The law is simple:

What you give to the world eventually returns to your door.

Your soul writes its own story. Choose the actions that protect your peace, so the results that return will strengthen your journey — not destroy it.

Chapter: Understanding Right and Wrong Through Consequences

The Sanamahi Perspective on Moral Action

Sanamahism does not divide life into sinful and holy. Instead, it asks a simple and powerful question:

Does this deed bring benefit or harm to me and to those around me?

Every action contains two results:

- One that affects the doer
- One that affects others

By examining both sides, we understand whether a deed leads the soul forward or pushes it into suffering.

The Fourfold Measure of Actions

Every human action falls into one of these categories:

1. Beneficial to the Doer

Beneficial to Others
→ Highest and most righteous actions

These deeds spread prosperity, peace, and growth to all.

Examples:

- Helping others while achieving your own success
- Sharing knowledge, kindness, guidance
- Living with honesty, cooperation, and compassion

Such actions:

✔ Expand spiritual strength
✔ Create harmony
✔ Attract positive returns

Right action is what uplifts everyone connected to it.

2. Beneficial to the Doer

Harmful to Others
→ Short-term gain, long-term suffering

These actions give temporary advantage but create negative consequences.

Examples:

- Cheating to win
- Using others for personal gain
- Violence or exploitation

The benefit will later return as suffering.

Any happiness built on another's pain becomes sorrow in return.

3, Harmful to the Doer

Beneficial to Others
→ Noble sacrifice (spiritual glory)

These actions may look painful, yet they uplift the soul and the world.

Examples:

- Parents sacrificing for children
- Leaders working for their people

- Protectors risking their life for safety of others

The universe honors such deeds.

The soul grows highest through selfless love.

4. Harmful to the Doer

Harmful to Others
→ The lowest form of action

Driven by anger, jealousy, addiction, or ignorance.

Examples:

- Revenge
- Destructive violence
- Corruption that hurts everyone involved

These deeds weaken the soul and create endless suffering.

When you try to destroy others, you destroy yourself first.

5, Useless Category:

3. Neither beneficial nor harmful to anyone
   → Spiritual stagnation

These are empty actions — harmless but meaningless.

Examples:

- Laziness
- Time-wasting habits
- Idle talk with no purpose

No growth. No evolution. A silent danger to destiny.

The soul's greatest enemy is wasted time.

Table: How Actions Shape Destiny

Type of Action	Doer	Others	Spiritual Impact
1. Good → Good	Benefits	Benefits	Harmony, Growth
2. Good → Bad	Benefits temporarily	Harm	Consequence returns
3. Bad → Good	Suffers temporarily	Benefits	Spiritual reward
4. Bad → Bad	Suffers	Harm	Downfall & suffering
5. Neutral → Neutral	No change	No change	Stagnation & delay of destiny

The Guiding Question

Before any action, Sanamahism encourages us to ask:

Does this action strengthen the inner power of my soul? Does it bring peace into the world?

Conclusion: The Wise Path Forward

The universe does not judge with fear or force.
It simply reflects what we create.

✔ If you spread light — light returns
✔ If you spread suffering — suffering returns
✔ If you remain still — your destiny stops moving

Your destiny is shaped deed by deed, choice by choice.

Choose actions that uplift your soul and the souls around you. That is the true definition of “right” in Sanamahism.

Why Do Meitei Worship Sanamahi (Cemen) as the Spirit of All Life?

In Sanamahism, Cemen (Sanamahin) represents the living spirit that flows through every being. We Meitei worship Sanamahi not as a statue or an object, but as the eternal flame of life inside all existence.

The Spirit as a Transmitted Flame

A beautiful principle explains this:

Life is not created from nothing. Life is lit from life.

Just like:

- One lamp lights another lamp
- Yet both flames remain equally bright
- The original flame never becomes less

In the same way:

➡ The first divine life force
➡ Passed into every ancestor
➡ And continues into every new birth

The body is new… but the fire inside comes from the ancient source: Sanamahi — the root spirit.

Cemen: The Carrier of the Living Flame

When a child is born, the living force (Thawai / Soul) enters the body through Cemen.

Cemen is like:

- The bridge between divine spirit and human life
- The thread that connects all souls in a single origin
- The channel of Sanamahi's eternal light

Thus, every breath…
every heartbeat…
every conscious act…
is powered by Sanamahi inside us.

We do not go to a temple to find God.

We carry God within our chest.

Sanamahi: The Spirit Inside the Home

Unlike religions where God stays in a distant sky Sanamahism says:

The highest divine lives inside the household. In the hearth. In the family. In the soul.

That is why every Meitei home has:

- Sanamahi Kachin → Sacred seat of the spirit
- Cemen → Keeper of the living flame

Worship is not outside — it is intimate, personal, and continuously alive.

Why Worship Sanamahi as Spirit?

Because Spirit is the true identity of every living being.

- Body changes
- Names change
- Generations pass
- Kingdoms rise and fall

But the spirit remains eternal, moving from one life to the next
like a flame carried gently through time.

By worshiping Sanamahi,
we worship:

✔ Our origin
✔ Our life-force
✔ Our purpose
✔ Our eternal continuity

Worship of Sanamahi
is worship of the life that flows within us.

Conclusion : Sanamahi is not far away…
not separate…
not unreachable.

He is the light inside every life,
passed lovingly through Cemen
from the first creation to the newest child.

This is why Meitei people say:

“Sanamahi is my life. Cemen is the carrier of my spirit. As long as I live, Sanamahi lives in me.”

Who is Lainingthou Sanamahi?

In Sanamahism, the word Lainingthou means “King of the Lai (Spirits)”.
This title reveals the supreme role of Lainingthou Sanamahi — the Great Spirit who was formed at the initial guides, controls, arranges, and protects all other spiritual forces in the universe.

Every living being has Thawai, a spark of life, a spirit that gives consciousness. In Sanamahism, this living power does not appear by accident. It is transmitted — like a flame passed from one lamp to another. The source flame that lights all other flames is Lainingthou Sanamahi.

Just as:

- One candle lights many candles without losing its own brightness,
- Lainingthou Sanamahi shares the living essence to all beings, yet remains infinite and powerful.

Therefore, Meitei people worship Lainingthou Sanamahi as the Supreme Spirit, not as a distant god but as:

- The origin of our life force
- The maintainer of cosmic balance
- The guide for our spiritual growth

Lainingthou Sanamahi resides within every household and every human body as the closest divine presence — the very power that keeps us alive.

The Difference Between Lainingthou Sanamahi and Other Deities

In Sanamahism, not all divine beings are the same. Understanding Lainingthou Sanamahi in comparison with other deities helps us grasp the essence of Meitei spiritual thought.

Lainingthou Sanamahi: The Supreme Life Force

- Role: Lainingthou Sanamahi is the King of the Lai — the Great Spirit who guides, arranges, and lights all other spiritual forces.
- Function: He is the source of life. Every soul (Thawai) in living beings comes from him, like a flame passed from a lamp.
- Presence: Sanamahi resides inside every home, in every body, and in every living being.
- Worship: Devotion to Sanamahi is personal, continuous, and life-centered. It is not only ritualistic but connects the worshipper to the life force itself.

Other Deities (Lai, Umang Lai, Ancestral Spirits)

Role: These are spiritual beings who govern specific elements of life or nature but divided flame from the Lainingthou Sanamahi: most of them are living spirit of human that became Khoyum lai. Most of the Umang Lai worshiping in Kangleipak are born in human.

Other Gods and Goddesses: Control wealth, fertility, health, or destiny

Function: They act under the guidance of

- Lainingthou Sanamahi and operate within their assigned domain.
- Presence: Usually tied to specific places, like forests, rivers, temples, or ancestral homes.
- Worship: People offer respect, prayers, and offerings to them for specific help or protection, but they are not the ultimate source of life.

1. Key Differences at a Glance

Aspect	Sanamahi	Other Deities
Status	Supreme Spirit, King of Lai	Spirits serving under Sanamahi
Role	Source of all life, guides souls	Guardians or controllers of specific domains
Presence	Within all beings and homes	Specific locations or aspects of life
Worship	Life-centered, continuous, intimate	Ritualistic, occasion-based, situational
Power	Infinite, origin of all other spirits	Limited to their function or domain

4. Why Lainingthou Sanamahi Is Unique

- Sanamahi lights all other spirits.
- All other deities draw their power from him, either directly or indirectly.
- Worshipping other deities without connecting to Sanamahi is like lighting a lamp without connecting to the main flame — temporary and partial.

In essence: Sanamahi is the root. All other deities are branches.

Conclusion

Sanamahi is not one deity among many.
He is the living, guiding force of the universe, the source of every soul, and the protector of cosmic balance.
Other spirits exist to serve, protect, and maintain order, but Sanamahi alone is the eternal flame from which all life flows.

Is there restriction on food habits: in reality there is no restriction on food habit

Every living being has its own natural likes and dislikes:

- One person loves meat
- Another prefers soup
- Someone else enjoys fish the most

These differences come from each soul's unique nature – its past experiences, habits, and personality.

Likewise, spirits also have preferences:

- Some spirits prefer meat-based offerings
- Some like fish
- Some desire alcohol or sweet food
- Some even like the aroma of cooked rice or flowers

So when a spirit attaches itself to a person:

That spirit's cravings may control the person's food choices. And say this one is not suitable with Khoyum lai. But in reality there is no restriction on fooding under sanamahism.

What This Shows

Food desire is sometimes not purely physical — it can be spiritual.

When another spirit influences you:

- Your natural preference disappears
- Your soul becomes dependent
- Your purpose becomes weaker

This is why Sanamahism focuses on protecting one's spiritual autonomy.

Key Teaching: In Sanamahism:

You are free to eat whatever you wish, but every type of food carries its own influence on your body, mind, and soul. Sanamahism teaches that what we consume does more than sustain the body —it shapes our energy, emotions, and behavior.

For example:

- Eating meat may make the body physically strong and resilient, but it can also create a tendency toward anger, restlessness, or aggression.
- Foods that are fresh, plant-based, and balanced may calm the mind, increase clarity, and foster patience and harmony.
- Highly processed or excessively spicy foods may stimulate temporary excitement, but they can also disturb inner balance and weaken spiritual focus.

In this way, nutrition is not just about survival or pleasure — it is a tool to shape the soul and character. By choosing your food wisely, you influence your physical health, your emotional stability, and even your spiritual progress.

Sanamahism encourages mindfulness in eating: to be aware that every bite carries energy that interacts with your Thawai (soul). The stronger and more balanced your diet, the stronger and clearer your mind, and the more your soul can focus on its true purpose.

Conclusion: Sanamahism – The Philosophy of Self-Devotion

Sanamahism is more than a religion — it is a living philosophy.
It teaches how to connect with the Supreme Spirit, Lainingthou Sanamahi, and, through that connection, guide your own soul to become a fully awakened living spirit.

Unlike systems that focus on submission to external powers,
Sanamahism emphasizes self-realization and self-devotion:

- It is not about staying under the control of other spirits or deities.
- It is about discovering the power within your own soul.

- It is about aligning your thoughts, actions, and intentions with the eternal life force.

Through worship of Sanamahi, study of the soul, and understanding the natural law of consequence a person learns to:

✔ Protect their spiritual power
✔ Strengthen their soul
✔ Make choices that benefit themselves and others
✔ Walk a path of harmony, wisdom, and purpose

In essence:

Sanamahism teaches devotion to the Supreme Spirit while awakening the living spirit within yourself. It is a philosophy of self-guidance, not submission.

It is a path where the individual becomes fully responsible for their soul, nurtures it, and allows it to shine — just as Sanamahi's eternal flame lights every other spirit.

So you must allow your own soul to guide your choices whether in food, behavior, or life direction.

True devotion in Sanamahism means your soul remains the master, not the servant.

A powerful simple activities to be done in a day

Daily Concentration and Spiritual Alignment Practice

1. Upon waking, immediately align your soul.
   Recite the traditional invocation to attract and stabilize your thawai (soul):
   "Hada thawai thawai nangdi, Laiingthou epana punba khayomne.

Liklang choibgum choifade, liklu tatpgum tatfade. Khongkap yaikap lannasu chatfade, Laiingthou epana koubne mi mi kuk kuk."
This helps gather scattered inner energy and prepares the mind for clarity.

2. Pray to Laiingthou Sanamahi
   Offer a brief prayer requesting guidance, strength, and a fruitful day ahead.
3. Recall the tasks you must accomplish today.
   Mentally list the responsibilities of the day taking 5minutes and pray for the capability, discipline, and wisdom to complete them.
4. To saveguard from spirits Recite the traditional invocation to hand over to a piller of the house : (hai wadi heilom wane khutlai lepsi wane ngasi kouba korouda mina laina temsingnrakp pumba nangonda sinajari)
5. Maintain awareness throughout the day.
   Continually remember your tasks. This sustained attention is the foundation of practical concentration for everyday life.
6. Before sleeping, review your actions.
   Reflect on everything you have done during the day. If any mistakes were made, pray to Laiingthou for the strength, discipline, and clarity to correct them.
7. Prepare for the next day.
   Remember the deeds that must be done tomorrow. Ask for guidance to recognize anything wrong, risky, or harmful in advance so you may avoid it.

Benefits of this Simple Daily Discipline

By practicing these steps consistently, even an ordinary person can develop sufficient concentration, self-awareness, and spiritual clarity.

This routine strengthens inner discipline and allows a person to recognize better paths, precautionary signals, and spiritual guidance in daily life.

Below is a refined, formal, and comprehensive overall conclusion suitable for the end of your book on Sanamaism and purposeful living. If you want it shorter or longer, I can adjust it.

Overall Conclusion

Sanamaism, in its essence, is both a primitive and a highly evolved philosophy—a path that begins with simple daily practices and leads toward the profound fulfillment of one's life purpose. It teaches that the human soul is not passive but active, capable of shaping its destiny through discipline, clarity, and spiritual alignment. This philosophy does not demand elaborate rituals; instead, it emphasizes awareness, responsibility, and a direct relationship between personal actions and spiritual growth.

The core teachings—self-discipline, inner awakening, devotion to Lainingthou Sanamahi, and responsibility for one's deeds—form a complete system for any individual who seeks a meaningful and empowered life. Whether one is a student, youth, businessperson, householder, or elder, the principles remain universal. They guide a person to think clearly, act purposefully, correct mistakes, and live with dignity.

This book demonstrates that spiritual progress is not separate from everyday life. The same discipline that helps a person study better, work better, or manage a family also strengthens the soul. By following the four-legged system of daily practice—morning alignment, mindful action, evening reflection, and preparation for tomorrow—any person can develop concentration, inner strength, and spiritual insight.

Ultimately, Sanamaism shows that the path to fulfillment does not lie outside us. It lies in the awakening of our own spirit, the purification of intention, and the commitment to walk with truth and courage. When a person lives in harmony with their purpose, guided by the Supreme Spirit, life becomes clearer, challenges become manageable, and every action becomes part of a greater journey. This is the promise of Sanamaism: a way to transform an ordinary life into a purposeful, powerful, and spiritually awakened existence.

Writer’s final message

The points presented in this book represent only the ideological highlights of Sanamaism. They offer an introduction to its foundational principles, but they do not encompass the full depth of this ancient spiritual tradition. Sanamaism contains many inner practical systems, disciplines, and rules created by the Khoyum Lais. These systems operate at subtle spiritual levels and require sincere study, careful guidance, and personal experience to fully comprehend. In fact, Sanamaism preserves the true path through which a human soul can evolve into a living spirit.

Readers who wish to understand these deeper dimensions must go beyond the surface of ideas. The essence of Sanamaism becomes clear only when one chooses to enter its inner terrain—observing, practicing, and reflecting with genuine devotion. Those who undertake this deeper journey will uncover the intricate relationship between the human soul, ancestral wisdom, and the Supreme Spirit.

This book serves as the doorway. The path beyond it must be walked by the seeker.
